ProSobee®

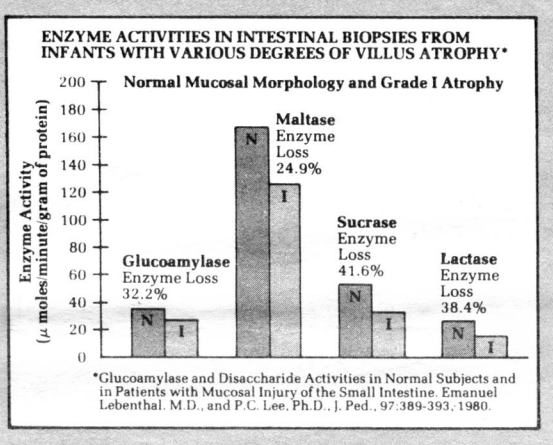
with 100% glucose polymers—the most compatible carbohydrate

for common feeding problems

L-K148-12-83 ©1982, Mead Johnson & Company • Evansville, IN 47721 USA

1. Consider enzyme activity.

Glucoamylase and maltase are more active than the more fragile brush border enzymes sucrase and lactase in infants with gastrointestinal illness (Grade I villus atrophy).



2. Choose the most compatible carbohydrate source.

Glucose polymers is the most compatible carbohydrate for infants with gastrointestinal illness and common feeding problems because it is digested by glucoamylase and maltase — the enzymes most resistant to mucosal injury.

3. Specify ProSobee.

The carbohydrate in ProSobee is 100% glucose polymers* — the most compatible carbohydrate because it avoids reliance on the more fragile brush border enzymes.

*As corn syrup solids

American Academy of Pediatrics

Dear Academy Fellow:

In order to fulfill the admission requirements of AAP bylaws, you are requested to:

Carefully review the following list of new applications for Academy membership. Relay your reactions directly to your district chairman (whose name and address are listed on the last page of this list).

In submitting these names of board-certified pediatricians to you, it is understood that academic and pediatric credentials are not in question. Comments are requested concerning possible legal and/or ethical situations about which you might have personal knowledge.

Send any comments on the following list of new applicants to your district chairman by April 5.
