Members and groups still can donate to the AAP For Our Future campaign, which has reached $3.25 million of its $4 million goal.

There have been more than 1,000 donors to date, including members, staff, pediatric hospitals, corporate partners, and AAP committees, sections, councils, districts and chapters. Nearly 30 AAP entities joined in fundraising efforts for the new Headquarters of the Future, with 90% of the gifts donated by pediatricians and pediatric subspecialists.

The Academy moved into the new building at 345 Park Blvd. in Itasca, Ill., in late fall, and the official opening was held in January (<http://bit.ly/ItascaAAP>). The facility is a five-story, energy-efficient 183,000-square-foot building with distinctive colored glass fins on the exterior. The 19,000 square feet of conference center space includes 83 conference rooms, some with state-of-the-art technology.
