

Lewis First, MD, MS:

Hi, I'm Lewis First, editor in chief of our journal Pediatrics. And given my last name, I get to be the first to tell you that this year, 2023, is a special year for our journal. It's our 75th anniversary, and I'm inviting you to help us celebrate the occasion. For the past 75 years, Pediatrics has dedicated itself to publishing the highest quality, peer-reviewed, evidence-based research. Research that has been designed to advance the science of pediatrics and in doing so, improve the health of all children. To recognize where our journal has been and where it's headed as we look to the future, we have created the 75th anniversary website that I hope you will bookmark. Over the course of the year ahead, we will be sharing with you on the site articles, historic timelines, videos and photographic images that reflect our history and tell the story of how our journal has evolved over the past three quarters of a century. I hope you'll join us and revisit this page frequently in 2023 as we add new content to this website. Content that will highlight this important milestone and recognize the role our journal has played in meeting the needs of health professionals and researchers so as to improve the health and well-being of infants, children, adolescents, and young adults. Join me in wishing Pediatrics a happy 75th anniversary.
